Jean's second novel of the Deck of Cardz series, Black Jack, picks up four years into Detective Shevaughn Robinson's career as PPD's lead homicide detective. She has gone from the cop that everyone, including herself, doubted to the "golden child" of the police department with a record of sensational arrests and closed cases. But when Helene Elliott is found dead from an apparent suicide, her family insists it was murder and pressures the Portsborough Police Department to take on the investigation. Detective Robinson is assigned to the case at a time when she is struggling to strike a balance between her personal and professional life.

Was the Elliott death a suicide or the work of a cold-blooded predator? Will life throw Shevaughn another unexpected blow?

Follow her as she moves closer to solving the Elliott murder, unknowingly rekindling old grudges and awakening a sinister spirit.

Wanna play?

Three years have passed since the Black Jack case ended. Shevaughn tracks the young, feral couple while they go on a tri-state rampage of lethal depravity, proving their commitment is one without morals, conscience or boundaries.
