BLACK LIGHT
world premiere

Remo Camerota may be the first to create an entire Animoji Band in an original music video using the iPhone X and Animoji's Black Light.

The official new video clip of the Duo's first collaborative efforts, is set to be a huge hit. Who would have thought that Animoji's jamming it out would look so cool! They certainly did and are now the first to use iPhone X Animoji's mixed with live action to create the most unique music video to come along in years.

The track started out as a musical experiment by Remo using old analogue technology then mixed it with the new sounds of Joel James Live. iPhone Animoji's were not even invented yet, but as soon as they were, the boys saw the potential of creating something unique in using these crazy critters as the backdrop for their new single. The rest is history.

Apples constant evolution of technology enables users worldwide to create great things and these guys took it one step further. And the video even went Viral at Apple Headquarters in Cupertino vindicating the use of Animoji's as a legitimate art form.

The video also picked up an award for best moving image category at the IPA - International Photography Awards - The Lucies New York.

Now its your chance to see its world premiere at the New Film Makers LA Film Festival!

You gotta see it to believe it, so feast your eyes on Monky James, Robo Camero, Piggy Stardust and Panda McCartney blast out this Animoji anthem for the new millennium!
