

FUCK HANEKE: UM FILME DE JOÃO CANUTO

Heavily medicated and dealing with immense pain from recent diagnose of Crohn's disease, a young man in quarantine, reflects on his love for cinema, dealing with conditions such as depression and fibromyalgia and also his past traumas, which involve alcoholism, drug use, rape and trying to kill his own father while still a child.

Inspired by the works of Michael Haneke and Chantal Akerman, "Fuck Haneke: Um filme de João Canuto" is a no-budget one man production self-exploitation dichotomic experimental biography starring its own director. It blurs the lines between fiction and reality, using visible equipment, badly recorded audio, 4th wall breaking and every tool of the cinematic language conspiring to make the audience question what a film even is, while at the same time providing a powerfully raw and emotional testimony on overcoming your own insecurities and learning self-love.

"Very powerful and very moving. Loved those long, long takes. Painfully confessional."
-Gary Friedman

"...The lack of higher meaning that unifies and gives meaning to the experience of being alive, doesn't condemn us to a nihilistic chaos but instead, force us to walk the same path as everyone else, in search for something that only few can see. All this filmed under a diffuse light, called conscience. Thank you."
-C.Pinto

"You simply had the courage of expressing the harsh and raw truth that everyone deserves to see. Continue to be yourself and you will conquer the world."
-Patrícia Perfeito

"Fuck Haneke: Um filme de João Canuto" is the first feature length movie from director João Canuto and his production company Junkyard Hounds, after a few years of directing several no-budget short and medium length films and filming concerts while fighting several debilitating conditions, starvation due to poverty and being sued for some of his projects. Frequent collaborator with Ron Thal (Guns n'Roses, Sons of Apollo, Asia), João believes that pushing the film medium forward is the most important thing one filmmaker can do.
