Film Synopsis

When the Rabbit Got the Gun is an immersive and intensely personal story of addiction, mental illness, and transcendence brought to vivid life in this experimental documentary.

Director's Statement

When the Rabbit Got the Gun was inspired by years of documentary production in collaboration with Los Angeles-based organizations that support unhoused and substance abuse recovery communities.

Upon moving to another part of the world with weather patterns significantly more challenging for the unhoused than Southern California, I began connecting with local community members and support groups to learn and to contribute.

One of the extraordinary people I met, Mr. Glenn Plotner, collaborated on this experimental documentary and it is his story and voice that serve as the narrative engine of When the Rabbit Got the Gun.

With gratitude,
Christian Rozier Director

Director Bio

Christian Rozier began his career as a music video and commercial director, producing broadcast videos for politically engaged artists locally and internationally. His documentary film credits include Among the Trees, a world tour feature film that follows the seminal hip-hop group Arrested Development throughout, and Life In The Age Of Excess, a documentary about an emerging barter economy movement in Los Angeles.

Christian is also one of the featured filmmakers in the United Nations sponsored global film One Day On Earth and a screenwriter of the 2013 feature film Lineage. He has produced documentary films in Senegal and in Southeast Asia, and his documentary Racing The Past has won awards at numerous festivals.

He is the director of the 2021 feature film Apache Leap and serves as Professor of Film Studies and Digital Storytelling at the University of Missouri.
