

MOVIE REVIEW
BY JOHN LEARY

AURORA 663

The most dangerous weapon is our mind!

A mysterious stranger must save an injured nine year old girl from a plane crash while being hunted for a crime he did not commit.

AURORA 663 is the new Feature Length Sci-Fi Action Movie from Award Winning Director and Writer, Don Dingas. He is also a co-producer and has a starring role.

AURORA 663 is a movie destined to cause you to question three emotions or feelings you have: your perspective, your thoughts, and your conscience.

Everyone can identify with those three emotions or feelings on many things we all face daily. But, when we allow those three obvious parts of our persona to become realities or be real, then a fourth dimension enters. ACTION! Our actions are governed by influences that we have already experienced or that we are currently experiencing, and the perception generated will make a difference on the end result.

During my enjoyment of AURORA 663, I felt that the character portrayals in AURORA 663 were challenging my perception of past events in my life and the current and on-going issues which are very simple but also complex. These characters made me realize how my perspective, my thoughts, and my conscience can fluctuate based on how my emotions or feelings are received by my mind as the realities or real events occur.

There are many conflicts facing the main character who feels the tremendous struggle to save an injured nine year old girl from a plane crash while being hunted for a crime he did not commit. What is true and what is actually just your perspective, your thoughts, or your conscience!

Don Dingas continues to create very emotional and action filled adventures in film with a variety of colorful characters and themes. AURORA 663 continues that focus.

WHO is the girl? WHAT is the crime? Can you answer based on your perception, your thoughts, or your conscience?

The most dangerous weapon is our mind!

AURORA 663