THE STORY BEHIND THE STORY

MORTUUS EST

Mortuus Est is a series that follows the rise and fall of an organization of assassins.

Mortuus Est was originally conceived as a short film that originated from two monologues. Casting our classmates in our theatre class at West Los Angeles College, we set out to make a 10-minute short. Realizing there was more to the story, we ended up scrapping the film to work on expanding the world of Mortuus Est. There were debates of what medium it should be and eventually in 2019, it was decided that the first installment of the Mortuus Est story would be produced as an audio drama podcast.

From the beginning, Mortuus Est has been a project committed to casting diverse talent. We wanted to see people like ourselves playing the lead roles, so went and created a project that did just that. Our production is led by people from the POC, LGBTQ+, and neurodivergent communities.

WRITER | DIRECTOR | EDITOR

NIK JERMAINE

(SHE/THEY)

ABOUT

NIK

Nik Jermaine is a writer, director, and model/actor based in Los Angeles. She, along with Chris Nelson, created the story of Mortuus Est in 2017 and eventually created the production group, Crazy10 Entertainment.

She comes from a theatre background and grew up singing in classical music competitions. An self-professed pop culture nerd, she can always be found at opening nights of her favorite franchises or at different conventions. (She'll cosplay, on occasion.) Nik has also spoken at panels on comic cons, as well as modeled for brands that are well known amongst con-goers.
