Antonia Kim's Choon: An AI Film That Feels Remarkably Human

Los Angeles, CA – [Insert Date] – Choon, the highly anticipated AI-driven mystery romance thriller by South Korean filmmaker Antonia Kim, is making waves as a singular cinematic experience. At 28 minutes, this standalone story captivates with its exploration of obsession, memory, and emotional recovery.

Set in a rehabilitation hospital, Choon revolves around an emotionally fragile patient suffering from amnesia, her obsessive therapist, and a nurse who secretly watches over them. The project has drawn comparisons to hit series like You (Netflix) and Sharp Objects (HBO) for its psychological tension and rich character development.

"When creating Choon, my goal was not to craft a sci-fi fantasy but to create an AI film that feels as close to humanity as possible," says Antonia Kim. "This is a work into which I poured my entire heart and soul. Rather than words, I hope this video speaks to your heart."

Choon is based on a deeply personal story by American screenwriter Anthony Torino Blevins, inspired by dreams following the tragic loss of his wife. His haunting yet beautiful narrative became the foundation for a creative collaboration with Antonia Kim and Upstage Entertainment founder Alison Dumbell, who introduced the two visionaries.

"Working with Antonia on this project was an inspiring journey," says Anthony. "Her dedication to capturing the raw emotional depth of Choon has elevated my story in ways I could never have imagined."

The result is a deeply moving story brought to life using AI tools like MidJourney, Runway, and ElevenLabs, among others. The project transcends its technological origins, creating characters and moments that resonate on an emotional level.

Choon has been submitted to several AI-focused film festivals, including:
