About

Annabelle Miller is an emerging filmmaker originally from Mulubinba (Newcastle, Australia). She has an interest in exploring the mundane, weaving everyday moments into stories that offer deep insight into human nature through her filmmaking practice. With a focus on dialogue and relationship, she shapes her writing and directing as ways to reflect the people around her, often drawing from conversations shared with friends or overheard by strangers.

Annabelle was brought up in her hometown of Mulubinba (Newcastle, NSW) but now creates on Waranue land (Sydney, NSW). She travels between both regularly.
