TOMORROW PICTURES

I take pictures.

In today's world of selfies and smart phones why take a picture?

Smart phones capture a moment of emotion or reinforce a belief that you may not care about tomorrow.

I take pictures with cameras – both still and moving - to capture a moment and demonstrate profound life experience.

I want to anoint the nature of human beings as it relates to their environment.

Images are my way of telling that story.

The many different experiences of people are my canvas for image capture and inspiration.

The uniqueness of my work is the uniqueness of my life.
I have traveled. I have lived. I have visited Africa, Asia, Europe,
South America and seen most places in rural and urban America.

I am a human being contained in a vessel that for some has limits or boundaries. These falsehoods enable me to soar higher and reach deeper into the universe.

Who I am and what I am set a tone and sends a message that all people have a place in the light and under God's sun. I am an artist that lives outside of the box.

I am an artist because I want the world to not hurt itself, live in truth and be a better place for all. I am an artist because I appreciate the values of the past, the knowledge of the present and the hope for the future.

The camera is an extension of my heart, soul and character. This power allows my mind to dismantle and disrupt constructs such as human abuse, disadvantage and environmental neglect.

Culture is dusty roads and the hard concrete.

Culture is knowing that we need each other.

Culture is the universe joining hands and singing.

I have been there to take those pictures.

It is what I have studied, and it is what I have put into practice.
Both my existence and waking consciousness is images.

These experiences have allowed me to have a deeper understanding of all people. I respect and celebrate the unique existence of all lives as if they were my own. It is my belief the core elements of culture are admiration and understanding.

Images are my way of telling that story.

I take pictures today for tomorrow.
