FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

MauHaus Productions Presents Season Two of A Blind Play of Social Forces.

[ATLANTA, GA]--From MauHaus Productions, the second season of the anthology narrative podcast series will air May 4, 2023.

Adapted from the collected short fiction of creator Michael Mau and inspired by a quote from Richard Wright, the first season, produced on a shoestring budget, challenged listeners with such topics as abuse, racism, transphobia, PTSD, and poverty; but also family, grit, resilience, compassion, and platypuses.

Season Two is focused on damaged relationships and lonely people looking for wholeness. In other words, humans.

Each of the ten episodes will be a stand-alone story so you can listen in any order. The series is rounded out by engaging interviews with the show's voice actors. You may recognize the voices of many of the actors from some of your favorite television shows and movies.

Here's what listeners are already saying:

"Must listen!!"

"Brilliantly written short stories performed by an impressive cast of talented actors. A Blind Play of Social Forces offers an intense, provocative, and moving glimpse into human nature.

Noteworthy and compelling, these stories beg to be heard."

"These stories touch my heart, mind, and soul."

"I just started and I'm already sucked in. What a great concept and brilliant execution."
