

Meghan Colovos

Film Director, Writer, Production Designer & Costuming

About Me & Director's Statement

Meghan Colovos is an American Filmmaker and Writer. Her work has been featured in film festivals and has received recognitions. Meghan completed an internship abroad in Prague, Czech Republic - where she worked for a marketing and distribution company called Bontonfilm. For two years, Meghan also worked as the marketing and research assistant to one of her professors (G. Chesler) at George Mason University and assisted with the promotion of two documentaries. Meghan's own work includes Writing, Directing, Production Design, and Costuming. She has done all of the Production Design and Costuming for her own films that she has also written and directed, and has worked on other student sets as a Production Designer and Costume Designer. Meghan is a 2026 graduate from George Mason University and currently holds a Bachelor's Degree in Film and Video Studies.

"I am looking to make films that shift the expectations of cinema. My love of experimental and foreign cinema has helped me curate a unique visual experience for my audiences. I believe in flexibility to enhance my films as I go, and working with others has fueled my passion for filmmaking. I like to be surprised and explore different avenues that I can take my films down, and in this exploration, I uncover worlds where my stories live, ones that are mystical and full of magic. As a curator of unique visual experiences, I like to push boundaries within my filmmaking and storytelling, redefining the expectations surrounding cinema. My work extends from Writing & Directing into Production Design & Costuming, enhancing the magic in my work".

When The Rain Stopped

Poster Designed & Created by Meghan Colovos

- When The Rain Stopped (2024) was my debut film as a filmmaker and film student.
- When The Rain Stopped is an experimental short film & visual poem film based on a poem I wrote which centers around themes of anxiety and overcoming those emotions. This film was featured in George Mason University's Best of Film at Mason Film Festival and has screened at the Washington West Film Festival and other community spaces in the DMV area. It was also accepted into the 2026 "LA Film and Documentary Award" festival, where it received the Best Student Film Award.
- On this set, I worked as Director, Writer, Production Designer, Costuming, and Co-Producer.
- Synopsis: A young woman visually represents a poem, discussing the struggles of anxiety and her reconciliation with herself at the end, through an interpretive performance.

Μέλι (Honey)

Poster Designed & Created by Meghan Colovos

- Μέλι (Honey) (2026) is my second film as a film student in the roles of Writer & Director.
- On this set, I worked as Director, Writer, Co-Production Designer, Costuming, and Executive Producer. This film went on to be apart of George Mason University's Best of Film at Mason Film Festival (2026) and The Washington West Film Festival (2026).
- Synopsis: A young woman, who is slowly dying, continues to live her life the same way, every single day. She is always present in the cafe she and her sister own and is always having the same thing: a black tea with honey. When her sister discovers that the young woman doesn't have much time left, she decides to show her a wonderful time by doing the things they love together. Reluctant at first, the young woman eventually gives in to spending a day with her sister, but with her energy depleting, has to find the strength to carry through the day.
