

KNOWLEDGE IS POWER

It is a dangerous tool. It was made out of paper, fastened together to hinge at one side. Its vast belly carries theories, ideas, information, waiting to be discovered and tested. It has killed plenty of men who fought and perished to defend its doctrine. Aristotle condemned it, for its capacity of crippling human's memory efficiency. It is a product, to be sold; the wisdom it carries is no more than merchandise, manufactured by various writers with various agenda. The truth it carries is wretched and despicable.

It is a perfect host for imagination to fester and grow, for truism to be interpreted and misinterpreted. It can bring power, it can bring options, but it also can bring unfounded anxiety that might one day lead all Men to suffering and destruction.

Its death is coming. Its will lives on, resilient and flexible. It will take whatever form that the new century provided to prevail. A torrent of unchecked and unrestricted information, that is our uncertain future.
