A Very Long Night/La Noche Más Larga, Proyecto'ace, Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Using graphite drawings, large-scale digital prints, and animation, the installation contains an array of domestic imagery, allusions to play and role-playing, children's drawings and figures that come to life, all interconnected as a series of non-linear events. The viewer moves through the space, figuratively a home, and the animation takes them into "other worlds" where the strangest things happen. The installation emphasizes the tension between psychological and physical space while highlighting the vulnerability of the children and the mysterious presence of menacing adults.

Still from the animation.
