

Essence of Reality

Time is relative to the viewer, Einstein was right. This film will take a minute to watch.

How long is a minute? Too long or too short, depends on your perception. A prisoner's perception of a minute is probably different from ours. A morning to us is a night to others.

Why some human waste time, despite the wisdom of knowing its value?

Is it because of their perception, too?

It seems everything has to do with time is based on perception.

Time seems like an illusion from moment to moment. Yet, it is real.

But then, what is reality? Illusions are real phenomenal: dream, novel, game, film... Those images are not the real thing, but they stimulate feeling and emotion, and that's good enough for human.

Reality is ultimately timeless. The concept of time is made up by Men to make sense of the world around him.

Time is real, but a minute is not.

We are products of our time.
