

Find Your Clippings

Newspapers, magazines and pictures of yesteryear

Menu

Genre

Year

Contact

One result listed for
"Manor" + "Fire" + "Worcestershire" + "Sedgewick"

Berrow's Worcester Journal

— FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 12TH, 1819 —

BLAZE AT SEDGEWICK MANOR

On the Eleventh of November past, the esteemed Sedgewick Manor, in the county of Worcestershire, was consumed by flame. All those that mattered were accounted for. The cause of the blaze is as yet unknown, though reports suggest the fire started in the servants quarters. The Lord of the Manor and his esteemed family did escape, alerted by their faithful wolfhound in the early hours. The Manor has been completely consumed, and fears are growing that nothing of the original structure is salvagable. The Sedgewick family are mourning the loss of generations of priceless treasures and art by grand masters. One of the servants' children is rumoured to be missing in the fire, presumed dead.

Sedgewick Manor, which did burn to the ground on Eleventh November past

Back