TOUTTAY (Parrots) a Film by Shashank Shekhar Singh

SYNOPSIS : Gandhism in 21st century? a fake Reality, a real Fiction or Gandhi, a metaphor!

DIRECTOR'S NOTE

The world itself is a Myth. Everyone is trying to make a rule with a Flowchart that how to go about or else read and listen to someone and lead self-acclaimed compositions of life from their perspective. And there comes a boundary line where the acceptance ended and the rise of remarks began.

"They know, what they know, and that's how they don't know much"

Doubt is the hindrance of a vast knowledge. Limitations are the sickness that human minds are suffering from... in reflection to a bunch of intercepted Minds...

Touttay (Parrots) is a piece of delusional visual, which will always try to break the comfort of the known, the predicted, most informed, the trumps of the kingdom, the so-called politicians & the literates of course.

Touttay (Parrots) just happened, it was never a routine process to complete any kind of task. Touttay (Parrots) has a story, hidden in the maze, where the characters are trying to reflect today's status of a Country like India and its illusion of following the values of Mahatma Gandhi and who is Gandhi today (a metaphor). The dialogues are an interpretation of a (1984) banned poem "Gandhi Mala Bhetla" (I Met Gandhi).

Freedom of Speech is a past now, this film will be giving you the curiosity to know little more about the known history, which itself has a mileage to raise its bar according to the generation X. That Mileage is "Freedom of Thought".

Let the Birds Fly.....

- Shashank Shekhar Singh (S³)
