Synopsis:

No one hears your cries for help.

Director's Statement:

TRAUMA is a short film about one of the darkest stories we hear almost every day: Rape. No matter where we live, it's an everyday violence, affecting close to a billion girls and women over their lifetimes. Based on an statistics released by the UN, one rape happens every 120 seconds somewhere in the world.

Inspired by true events happened in the city I live (Tehran), TRAUMA shows how such event changes the victim's personality, forever.

The True Story Behind The Film:

During 2016 and 2017, several girls were raped by a motorcycle-riding man in the dark corners of Tehran alleys. After chasing his victims, he used to suddenly attack the young girls, pushing them into the curb and then rape them there.

The police couldn't catch him until father of one of those victims decided to find the attacker himself. After several weeks of searching, he could finally see a man chasing another young girl outside of a metro station. He took photos of him and sent them to the police... .

Inspired by those actual events, I wrote the script, but since it's MY story, I have every right to make things happen the way I wish!
