SYNOPSIS:

This story basically revolves around the two main character, a woman(Mitali) who comes to the Café daily to remember the memories of her husband spent in that café and she was stuck in that movement and doesn't want to move on from that situation.

A Man(Anurag) who is really cool in nature and a theatre teacher, comes in the Café. He saw Mitali sitting inside the café lonely. When he saw her he realized that he knows her but he didn't remember how. He goes to Mitali and asked her to confirm that did they really know each other. Mitali replied to him rudely that she doesn't know him and she want some peace. Anurag went out from there but there is a question in his mind that had he seen her before. He suddenly realised that might be his classmate from school. He goes to her and asked Mitali and as she agreed with that, he sits in the chair next to mitali and becomes more frank with her and started talking to her. Mitali feels irritated but wasn't able to stop him from talking. Then suddenly Anurag asked her, " did every girl in their class got married ?" Mitali replied ,"yes". Anurag felt very sad and he tells her that during school time he loved a girl which with whom he talked very less but every moment of his life he loved her. Now Mitali starts taking interest in his talks. Anurag tells Mitali everything about her and as Mitali is also very emotionally involved in her current situation, she asked him that how he was able to forget her even loving her so much. Anurag replied "I never forgot her, it's just I don't miss her", he continued that at one point he realized, if he continued to remember her he will never fully utilize his life for any good. So he had to leave that situation and had to move on with it. Mitali listened everything very seriously and evolved with her inner thoughts in the situation she is. Anurag leaves the café and then Mitali also gets up from her place and leaves from there to move on for something new.
