

Airborne - the Trials of Nine

1920s airborne flyers search for the last Satyr to save a dying land.

High in the poisonous sky a hot air balloon is swept north ahead of invading airships. On board are three cousins—Luke, Anna, and Aunt Izzy—all fugitives on-the-run.

Luke Murnau must save his family and restore the dying land. But Luke can't focus. Anna—the friend he watched die twelve years ago—is back from the dead.

Like a ghost from the past Anna Fahrlander has returned. And she's changed. Secretive and self-willed she is fixated with finding the supernatural satyr Nine before he is sacrificed to Lord Oberman's immortality machine.

Caught in the crossfire between Luke and Anna is gun-toting Aunt Izzy—keeper of a family secret so dire it could tear the cousins apart.

Can Luke and Anna rise above the past and take on Oberman and the AIRBORNE might of Metropia? It's a crash course to the edge of the world—to the Electric Shield Wave—all they have is each other and one far out Auntie.

Wanna fly? Call me for a copy of Airborne - the Trials of Nine.

Airborne - The Trials of Nine won first place at the Amsterdam International Film Festival Feature Screenwriting contest in 2019. It was an award winner at the World Series of Screenwriting Film Festival and a finalist at a number of International Film Festivals.

My short film Fortesque's Final Hour won the UK George Eady Prize, the Japanese Nagoya University Honourable Award and the Seoul National University Korean Prize.

I have a Masters Degree in Art & Design by Independent Film Project from The University of Brighton UK.

Richard Clarke
+44 7944788740
rickjclarke@yahoo.co.uk