CREATOR. DIRECTOR. PRODUCER.
GRACE GREENE.

Victoria Vertuga is a Los Angeles based actress/writer/producer/model/lover of slashes with a contagious energy and passion for creating. A California girl born & raised, she attended the University of Southern California where she graduated magna cum laude, proving she's more than just another pretty face.

Victoria has always had a great appreciation of the arts and an intense love of the stage. Growing up, her family used to put on talent shows every summer where her eccentric- yet very talented- extended family would sing, dance, play instruments, and do full blown productions of plays. In high school she began acting and dancing in school productions. While attending USC, she began acting in student films and commercials.

After college, she took that long held love of performing and began pursuing a professional career as an actress. In 2013 she began her television career on the long running soap opera "Days of Our Lives" and the hit Showtime series "Dexter." She has filmed national commercials for brands such as Budweiser, Toyota, Gap, Valley View Casino, and many more. As a model, she's been featured in everything from FHM Magazine to charity pin up calendars to major commercial print ads to coffee table books and art galleries across the country and abroad.

In 2018, she co-wrote her first half hour dark comedy pilot entitled "Tithes" with her partner Eric Williford. They followed that up by penning the entire first season, a short film, a feature horror film, and another 1 hour drama pilot that was recently a semi finalist at the highly competitive Austin Film Festival. Their latest project, a darkly comedic webseries called DisGraced, will be released later this year.

Victoria is a huge animal lover, a proud dog mom to three rescue pitbulls, and enjoys doing volunteer work with Angel City Pitbulls. She's also a self proclaimed foodie, which she credits to coming from a long line of fantastic Italian cooks; and an avid lover of traveling.

CREATOR. DIRECTOR. PRODUCER.

After graduating from the University of North Carolina at Wilmington, Eric Williford produced and wrote his first feature length project, the supernatural horror film "The 8th Plague". This film was immediately picked up for distribution by Anthem Pictures.

In September of 2006, "The 8th Plague" was theatrically premiered in Virginia to a sold out audience. "The 8th Plague" was awarded Best Feature at the 2006 Freakshow Horror Film Festival as well as Best Cinematography at the 2006 Chicago Horror Film Festival.

Immediately upon the release of "The 8th Plague", Mr. Williford produced another feature length horror film titled "CARVER". Matt Carmody, one of the actors from "CARVER", received the Best Actor Award at the 2007 Freakshow Horror Film Festival. On March 4th 2008, "CARVER" was released worldwide to overwhelming critical acclaim and a cult following amongst horror fans. The film was released domestically by Allumination Filmworks and Internationally by Dream Entertainment.

In June of 2011, Mr. Williford wrote, directed, shot, and edited the short film "Pack a Bag, Quick!". This horror film was selected to both the San Diego Film Festival and the Southern Cal Film Festival.

In November of 2015, Mr. Williford released the feature length thriller "Natalie's Lose Lose", a film that he directed, produced, shot, edited, and wrote. The film is available worldwide on DVD as well as download and streaming. The film was released by Shami Media Group.

In August of 2016, the short film "Between Us Girls" (written, directed and edited by Mr. Williford) screened during the Oceanside International Film Festival. After "Between Us Girls", Mr. Williford wrote, shot, directed, edited, and produced season one of the web series "Dollar". The web series is told from the perspective of a dollar bill that learns about human nature from its numerous owners. In October of 2017 the series played at the Brooklyn WebFest where it was nominated for "Best Writing".

"Anora", a feature length horror screenplay written by Mr. Williford, was a semifinalist in the 2018 Screencraft Horror Screenplay Competition.

In September of 2018 Mr. Williford released the horror short film "We Accept Cash", a film that he co-wrote, directed, edited, and co-produced with his producing partner Victoria Vertuga. The film played at the 2019 Short. Sweet. Film Fest and the 2019 Hollywood Comedy Shorts Film Festival.

In April of 2019, he completed the comedy short film "The Lost Films Of Ko Chiaki". He served as the director, writer, and editor on the project. The film has been accepted to the Covellite International Film Festival, The Atlanta Comedy Film Festival, and the Chicago Comedy Film Festival.

Eric Williford currently resides in Southern California.
