Two buck shattered by a dime.
So, I drink to ease the corners of my mind.
Running wild and moon's so cold.
And close my eyes to kill the sun before it shows.

Do you think of me?
In the dead of night?
When the trains roll by yours.
When the birds take flight.
Do you think of me?
In the dead of night?
When the trains roll by yours.
When the birds take flight.

If I could go back to the day.
Before the tides changed.
Before they washed away.
I would hold on this, I know.
I would hold on tight and never let you go.

Do you think of me?
In the dead of night?
When the trains roll by yours.
And the birds take flight.
Do you think of me?
When the trains go by.
When the birds take flight.
Do you dream of love?
Like the young'-ins do?
Before time sped up.
Before me and you.

Do you live your life every single day?
Or just wait for love, to come back your way.
Do you still drink your wine?
Like you used to do?
When you lick your lips, until they turn blue.
Do you run the taste, back inside your mind.
And then wonder why, every single time.

Do you think of me?
In the dead of night?
When the trains roll by yours.
When the birds take flight.
