

Brief Biography & Filmography

Personal Information:

Name: Amit Goswamy (Ex – Assistant Commandant, BSF)

Creative Skills: Direction, Cinematography, Script Writing and Editing.

Amit Goswamy, the Director/Producer of “The Last Tribe” has always been passionate about the wildlife and environment matters. In order to gain higher education in the field he did his Masters degree in Wildlife Science from Wildlife Institute of India (WII), Dehradun (2009-11).

His idea of conservation was to involve various stakeholders and enforcement agencies together. After doing the MSc (Wildlife Science) he decided to join the elite Border Security Force as Assistant Commandant and is working to increase environmental awareness among the forces. In order to follow his passion of story telling, he quit the BSF after over 6 yrs of prestigious service career in the armed forces, commanding the operations from Pakistan border to Anti naxal operations in Odisha. In the final year of his service life he served in the Public Relation Office of BSF in Delhi and made a few landmark films on various themes.

Currently he is working towards documentary making on various unexplored issues, and at present working on films on the wildlife and environment of the remote landscapes of India.

There has been a gap between wildlife conservation and real enforcement, and the answer lies in raising the awareness. He decided to work on documentary film making to bridge that gap and increase consciousness among the security forces. The result of this humble effort was "The Last Tribe" which is a unique story from the Naxalite area of India. A film shot in real time operations while holding the rifle and operating the camera simultaneously and reflects the beauty of untouched landscapes of the battleground of India.
