

Look Up!

Nicholas has issues... Then again, who doesn't?

Look Up! is a comedic short film by award-winning gay filmmaker, Monty Wolfe. The film follows Nicholas, a misanthropic queer teenager, who manipulates everyone around him for attention and affection. Even when forced into therapy by his parents, he somehow manages to take control and tilt the situation in his favor.

Look Up! was shot during the final days before the United States shut down due to the Covid 19 pandemic; in fact, the final scene, shot at the Student Center at Portland State University, was shot moments before the custodial staff locked the doors.

Monty Wolfe is a gay filmmaker who attempts to weave LGBTQ stories that exist outside the confines of consumer culture and the limiting parameters created by the mainstream media.

While he currently flourishes in the leftist paradise that is the Pacific Northwest, Monty grew up in the rural south and hasn't forgotten the lessons he learned there: hold your friends close, don't hold grudges, and above everything else, season your food.

“...Werner Schroeter vibes” - Dr. Kristin Hole
“The lead is beautiful and a natural actor” - minicine?
