Documentary film about the river Vjosa, which rises in Epirus in northwestern Greece and flows into the Adriatic Sea in Albania. Currently, over thirty dams are being planned in the area.
The existence of numerous small businesses and ecotourism enterprises depends on a free-flowing Vjosa. In addition, the crystal clear river has an emotional value for the people of Albania:
the Vjosa is perceived as a cultural heritage. Many girls are named after the Vjosa today; the name represents the beauty and the pristine nature of the river.
