Jhuge-Shiro (諸葛四郎), the first comic hero idol in the history of Taiwan comics

- The Jhuge-Shiro comic series created by Mr. Yeh, Hong-Chia is a common childhood memory of Taiwanese generations born from the 1940 to 1960s.
- In the song "Childhood" by Lo Da-Yu, "Jhuge-Shiro and the Demon Society, who took the sword in the end?" has been extremely popular.

- “Childhood Comics” received the complete IP authorization of Jhuge-Shiro, and strived to collect, restore, archive and publish the cultural assets, share over the Internet, and participate in new creative productions such as theatrical production, animations, and TV programs.

Synopsis of “Shiro - Hero of Heroes “

- Legend has it that the Dragon and Phoenix swords combined hold mysterious power. The leader of the Demon Society, Grinning Mask, conspires with a spy called Weeping Mask to infiltrate the Gui Palace and places a lockable mask on the Gui Princess.
- In exchange for a key to unlock the Princess’ mask, the Demon Society leader demands the Phoenix sword. Given his experience defeating the Demon Society, Shiro is called on by the Gui King to help.
- Before Shiro and the Gui Princess make it to the exchange site, the Demon Society members ambushes them. Shiro and the Gui Princess escape with the help of the powerful Phoenix sword and the assistance of a passing woodcutter. However, the woodcutter was killed in the escape.

- The woodcutter's son Ping mistaken Shiro as his father's killer and seeks revenge. While Shiro unlocks the Princess' mask, he is unable to fend off the Ping's fury and then regrettably loses the sword to the Demon Society. While burying his father, Ping discovered his father had taken the Dragon sword from the Demon Society.

- Before Ping can seek revenge against Shiro, he is attacked by the Demon Society members. Luckily, Shiro rescues Ping in time. Shiro picks up the Dragon sword and engages the Grinning Mask in an epic battle. Shiro defeats the Grinning Mask, who was forced to retreat. Ping then realizes that the Demon Society killed his father.

- Shiro, Ping and the Gui Princess' investigation soon reveals the identity of the Weeping Mask spy and the location of the Demon Society's secret lair. Thus, the three join forces to fight the Demon Society...
