In a totally different world. a ghetto boy has to save his life from a lethal police pursuit

SYNOPSIS

When a police cop dies in a curfew pursuit, a ghetto boy has to save his life from a lethal police cop who is determined to avenge her partner's death.

DIRECTORS REMARK

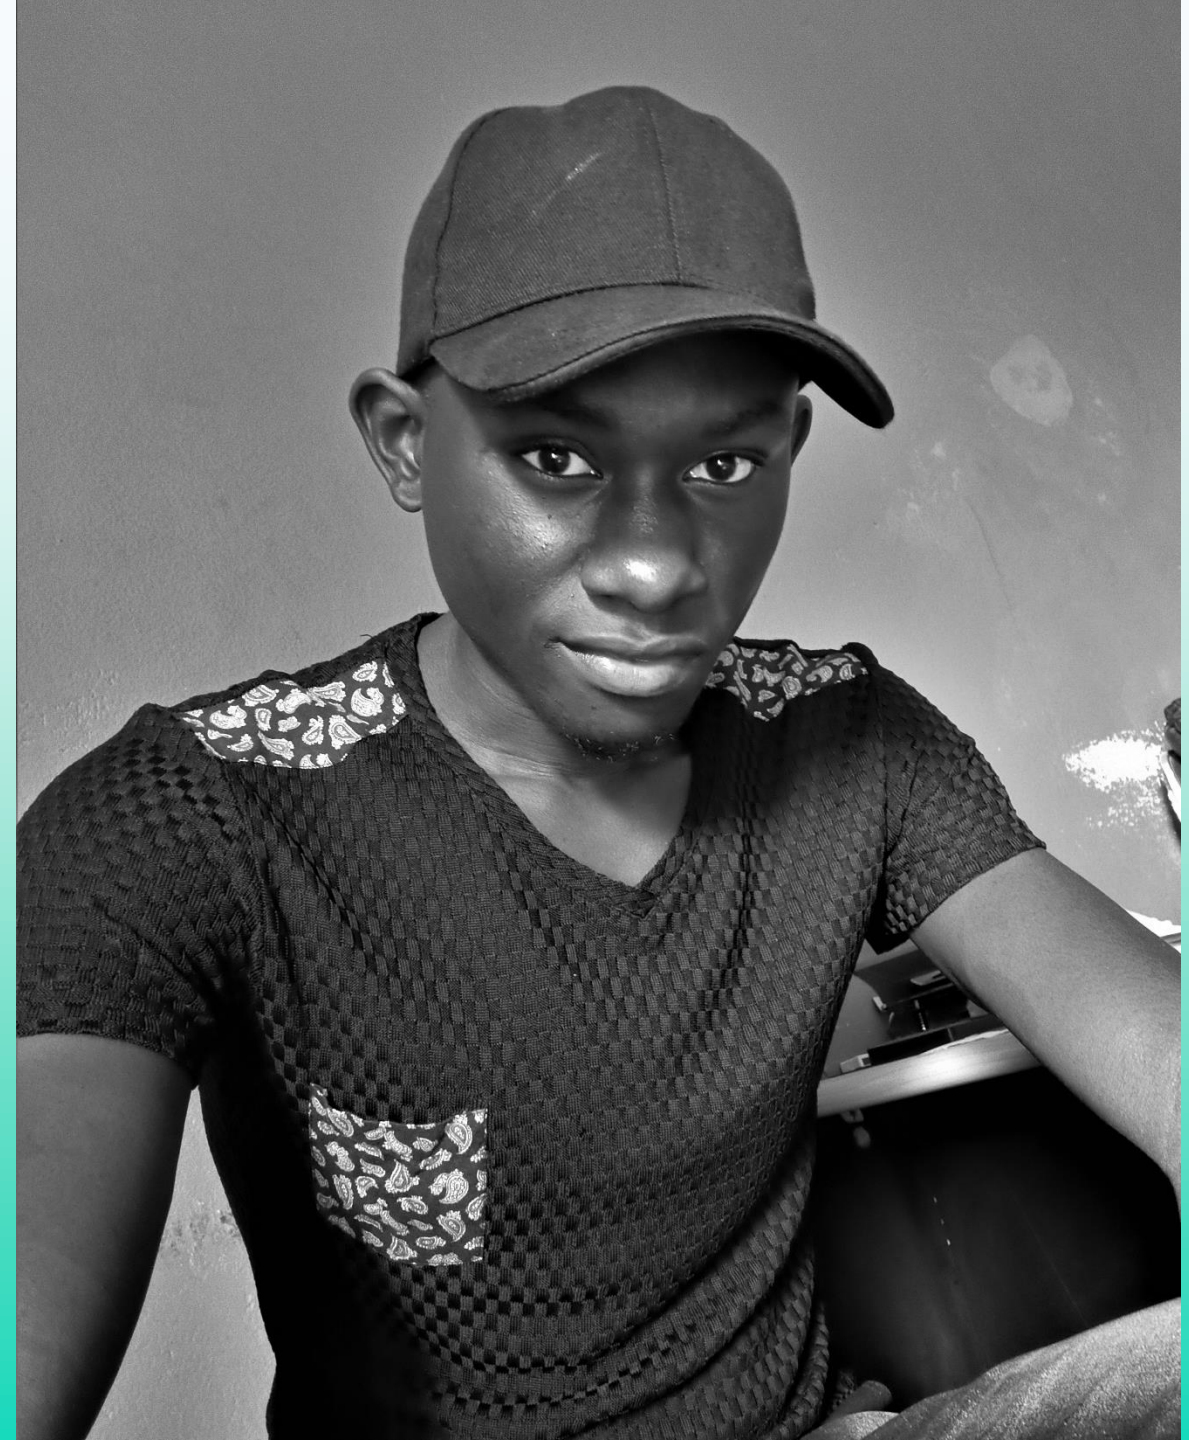

When I was 12, I got the very first glimpse of how films are made. (I guess it was around 2009 when I saw Forbidden Kingdom's behind the scenes on Record TV). That made me fall in love with filmmaking, I've always wanted to make an animated film.

I mean it's something different, telling a story through puppeteering with a computer, drawing or puppets themselves. I've tried telling stories through sketching during my high school and it worked. But those were school times. Right now I wanted to put something on plate, something different that a bigger population can look at.

Curfew Knights is clearly not be the best animation you have seen around the country but this is just a work of passion that marks my enthusiasm to create as a filmmaker.

I'm inspired by different brains around the Globe and our very owns, Loukman Ali, Raymond Malinga, Joseph Segwanya (Joswil Animex) and more. I've been around trying to create and trust me, but those three people have all played a part in motivating me to create this specific piece, not only by seeing their work but also talking to me about creating. So shout outs to them.

I hope to make more better stories, because I mean we are all here to learn through mistakes, I welcome all the criticism however bashing it will be. Thanks
