SYNOPSIS

Arron (Andrew Langemak) is a careless young man from a wealthy family who's faced next to no dilemma in his life that money hasn't made it feasible for him to find his way out of. After killing a woman in a car accident while speeding through traffic, Arron's family hires a high-dollar lawyer that was able to have him acquitted. After his court victory, he sues the dead woman's estate for damages and suffering for tens of thousands of dollars and succeeds, taking practically everything she left behind to her children. Rightfully shameful, Arron moves out of town, only to return a little less than a year later to attend his mother's surprise birthday party. When Robert (Joey Snyder), the slain woman's son who was her passenger that catastrophic evening and a survivor of the car accident discovers that Arron is returning to town the following weekend, he tracks him down to the hotel where he's staying to give him a piece of his mind - but it doesn't go down the way he had initially planned.

JOEY SNYDER

WRITER, DIRECTOR, PRODUCER

Joey Snyder is an American director and screenwriter based in York, Pennsylvania. He is the head of Humedia Studios, and takes a special interest in genre-fluid films that feature experimental formal and narrative characteristics. A lifelong storyteller, he began writing comic books as a child, which progressed to short stories as a teenager and eventually screenplays as a young adult. He won the Bob Hoffman Award for screenwriting in 2023 for his debut narrative short film, Hurry Up & Wait (2023).

Hurry Up & Wait is his first short film to be produced.

ANDREW LANGEMAK

ARRON

Andrew Langemak is a student at York College of Pennsylvania studying Economics. He was approached for the role of Arron by the director, Joey Snyder, in a theater class they both took.

Arron is Andrew's first role in film.

CORNELIA BEMPOH

SHAUNA

Cornelia Mawuena Bempoh, 19 years old, is a Ghanian-American actress, singer and dancer, who has had a gift for talents ever since she was young. In 2020, she started her acting debut when she starred as Justice Shiba in KKKops, then continued on later that year to star in The Second Shepards' play in December. She later picked up her acting career again in 2022, when she starred in short film Kara and Damon, as Kara.
