He is tormented by a strange memory from the past: a half-burned blue flower. However, his death does not end his journey. He finds himself in Helheim, the realm of the dead. It is a cold and dark place filled with souls that cannot find peace. They are condemned to relive their unworthy death over and over again. It is here that he finds the flower of his memories in the distance, and decides to follow it. He is watched from afar by a woman dressed in black. He finally reaches the flower but then discovers this same woman, who is indeed Hel, the goddess of death. When he sees her, his memory becomes clear and he remembers what he had seen in the forest as a child. He remembers finding a beautiful blue flower, a very rare flower and a girl standing next to him. This girl had half of her face covered with dead flesh. This girl was Hel. She was embarrassed by her appearance. But the boy was not afraid, he approached her and offered her the flower. This flower became a symbol of their bond. The boy heard his mother's cry, calling him, and ran away. He never saw Hel again, until her death. Only in Helheim did the two finally reunite. Scene : Act 3 - Scene 2: (The main character remembers an event from his childhood.) When he was a little boy, he found a rare flower in the woods, but also met a little girl, with dead flesh on half of her face and body. (Hel, goddess of death) The boy saw that she was ashamed of her appearance and did not dare to look at him. He approached her and offered her the flower. Hel took the flower and smiled at him. The boy's mother called her and he ran away. Duration : 6 minutes 57 seconds
