LOGLINE:

After his bossy stepfather decides to take him on a business trip, 16-year-old Michalis spends his last day in the city hanging out with his friends. It will be a day full of illegalities, music and bold risks.

SHORT SYNOPSIS:

Michalis is 16, social and emotional. He likes to spend his days hanging out with his friends, with whom he is very close. When he is with them he feels invincible. At home, the situation is really different. His stepfather, Yannis, is bossy and, often, violent, something Michalis has not shared with his friends. Besides, he has his mother, who is very nice. But she never talks. When Yannis decides to take Michalis with him on a business trip, Michalis is forced to take charge of the situation. Luckily, he won't be alone.

Director's Note:

Bad Kids with Saint Names is a coming-of-age movie about friendship, resilience, personal revolution and hope.

I aimed to capture the untamed beauty and innocence of teenage friendship. In our story, Michalis grapples with challenges that surpass his age and erects barriers. However, his friends prove that regardless of circumstances, their friendship remains unfiltered and unwavering. There are no ifs or buts—they are always there for each other, akin to a steadfast wolf pack.

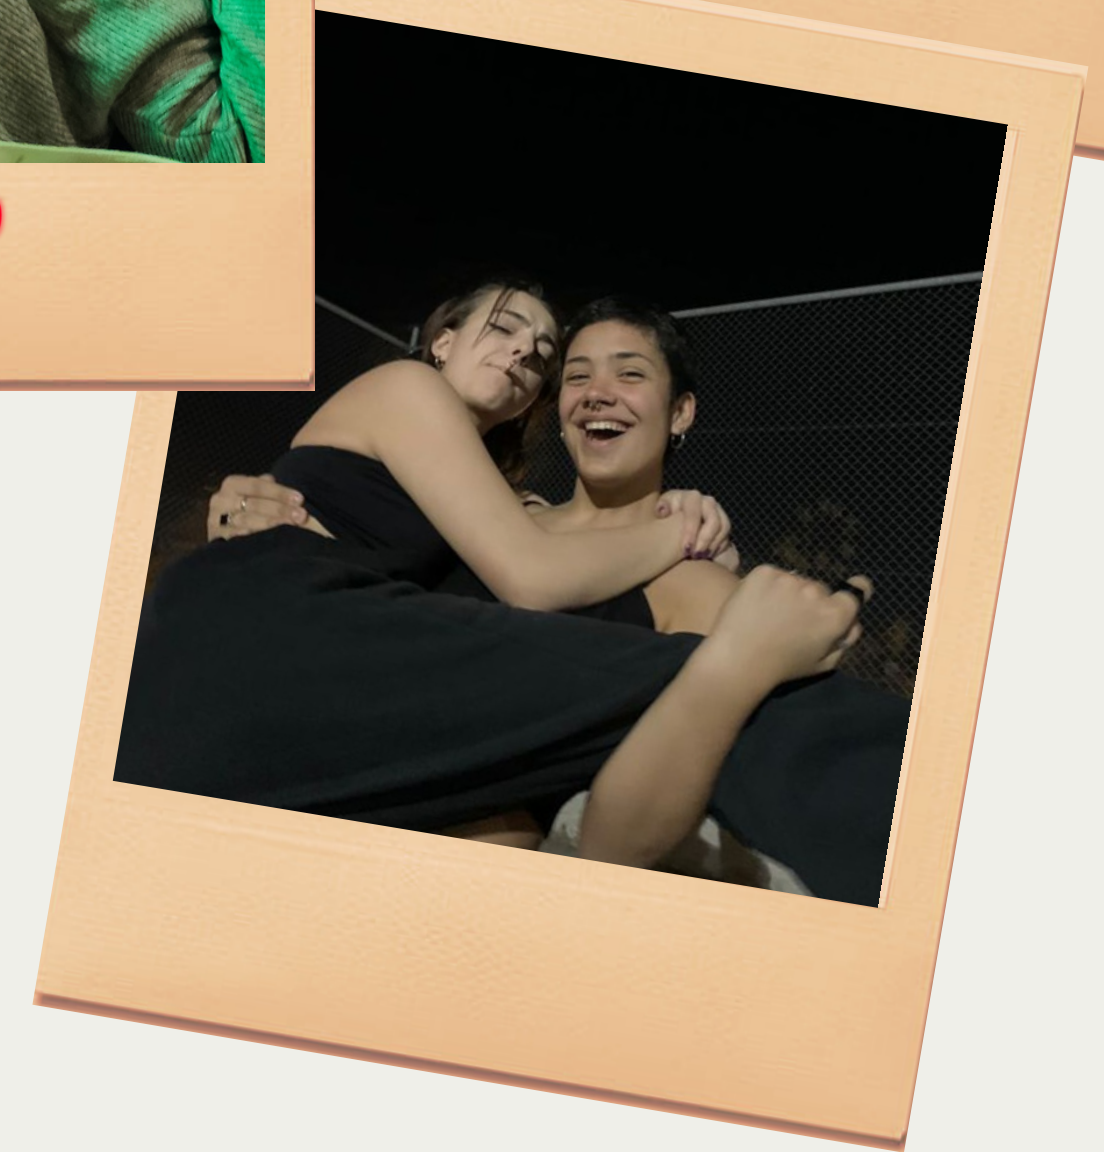

If someone watches 'Bad Kids with Saint Names', I would like for them to awaken emotions, to reminisce about some moments of their adolescence, and to wonder if they need to start their own revolution against something that suffocates them.
