SYNOPSIS:

When Marty Greybow a video store owner from Brooklyn inherits a house from his deceased parents, he let's his love interest Christine who he met online move in thinking she likes him but the real truth is Christine is just looking to live somewhere rent free as anyone in expensive New York City. Christine in turn let's a number of suspicious people move in without Marty's approval. To make things worse, Marty's cousin and her friend who have nowhere to stay convince him to let them stay too. In time, none of the residents and neither has Christine have paid any rent or bills which causes Marty to ask them to leave. Marty quickly finds out that evicting someone in the city of New York is not as simple as he thought, so he seeks legal and illegal ways to evict the non paying tenants.

DIRECTORS STATEMENT:

I came up with the film series when a friend of mine encountered the same issues after letting his love interest's friends stay at this house, though the situation was kind of sad because he couldn't get rid of them due to NYC renter laws, I for some reason thought it was funny with lots of possibilities. I shot the series on a 0 budget by myself and one other crew member and I hope you enjoy it.
