LOGLINE

Join sculpture artist Kevin Titzer on a race against time as he creates a monumental art installation, captured by documentary filmmaker Jordan Barclay in a mesmerizing journey of gathering materials and meticulous assembly.

SHORT SYNOPSIS

Sculpture artist, Kevin Titzer, only had two weeks to complete a large art installation at the University of Southern Indiana's Pace McCutchan Gallery. Titzer returned to his home town of Evansville, Indiana to construct an art installation. In this short documentary, filmmaker Jordan Barclay captured the entire process of gathering locally sourced materials and meticulously assembling the art installation.

LONG SYNOPSIS

Embark on a journey with sculpture artist Kevin Titzer in this short film. Challenged to craft a monumental art installation within a mere two weeks at the University of Southern Indiana's Pace McCutchan Gallery, Titzer's race against time becomes an intriguing narrative. Filmmaker Jordan Barclay captures Titzer's quest as he returns to his hometown of Evansville, Indiana. Watch as he navigates the local landscape, delving into hoarders' trash, scouring dumpsters, and exploring flea markets to unearth materials that assemble into a room-sized, interactive installation. The end result is a unique creation, inviting tactile exploration and thoughtful examination.
