A new house, a new life, a new... horror!

A HAUNTING
IN COUNCIL HOUSE

SINOSI

Yara is an immigrated girl. Escaped from the horrors of the war, she finds herself in a refugee center. Here she will meet Lucas, with whom she will start a relationship. With the help of the social worker, Nadia, the couple, in economic difficulties, manage to find a temporary accommodation in a council house, unaware that the real horror will start as soon as they cross that door.

"A Haunting in Council House" is a long horror feature that blends social themes with horror. In Italy, as in the world, the flow of immigration is always increasing. Many men and women leave their country, hit by wars or natural disasters, to seek salvation in other countries, and if they survive the journey, they don't always find the right welcome. This film aims to shed light on this issue even in the context of horror entertainment. In addition to the theme of immigration, topics such as depression, insomnia, Satanism, and witchcraft will be addressed.

ABOUT THE DIRECTORS

ALEX D'ANTONA

Alex D'Antona (Taranto, May 19, 1987) is an Italian independent film director, screenwriter, and actor, currently a university student at DAMS in Bari. In 2014, he began his journey as a theatrical actor with the Mola-based company "Tuttinscena - Culture & Entertainment," where he took on diverse roles, ranging from the hunchback Iago in Aladdin to the Cat in Pinocchio. His first role in cinema came in 2016 when he portrayed the ghost of an old lady in the film "Haunted" by Funny Dreamers Production, which had international distribution. He continued collaborating with Funny Dreamers on "Clownery" and simultaneously joined the L/D Production Company, becoming a cast and crew member in productions such as "The Last Heroes," "Caleb," and "Hidden - Buried Truths."

D'Antona made his debut as a director and screenwriter in 2021 with "Applausi," a short film denouncing homobitansphobia in Italy. The film was conceived and created in collaboration with Fabiano Tagarelli, following the Senate's rejection of the Zan Bill. The synergy between the two directors was so strong that they formed a small collective, an informal production group named PAF! Production. The following year, together with Fabiano Tagarelli, they wrote and directed their second short film, "Millennials Addiction," aiming to depict neglect and loneliness in a debilitating waiting. In 2023, in collaboration with Fabiano Tagarelli, they wrote and directed their first feature film, "A Haunting in Council House," produced by V Channels Media in collaboration with Funny Dreamers Productions.

FABIANO TAGARELLI

Fabiano Tagarelli (Monopoli, March 6, 2001) is an Italian independent film director, screenwriter, and actor, currently a university student majoring in Arts and Entertainment at Bari. In 2021, he met Alex D'Antona, and together they decided to create an artistic collaboration, bringing to life their debut work, "Applausi," which they co-wrote and co-directed. The chemistry between the two directors was so profound that they formed a small collective, an informal production group named PAF! Production. The following year, in partnership with Alex D'Antona, they wrote and directed their second short film, "Millennials Addiction," in which Tagarelli also played the lead role. The film aimed to depict neglect and loneliness on screen within the context of a consuming wait. In 2023, Fabiano Tagarelli expanded his artistic repertoire by portraying the character Adamo in Eros D'Antona's film "Bloody Trip: Rise of the Dead." In the same year, in collaboration with Alex D'Antona, the two wrote and directed their first feature film, titled "A Haunting in Council House," produced by V Channels Media in collaboration with Funny Dreamers Productions.
