Two men meet through a screen and struggle to get closer in an impossible pre-written reality

Synopsis

In this short film, we meet Omer and Nir, two young men navigating today's world through the Grindr app, who decide to meet. Driven by a strong desire to feel, They decide to engage in brief emotional encounters, each adopting different personas, which unfold rapidly on screen. Ultimately, these encounters lead to the growth of intense emotions, culminating in a powerful climax, only to return once again to feelings of emptiness and the cycle of loneliness

Director's Statement

Reality has shifted to a digital, emotionally distant realm, where genuine connection feels almost non-existent. Amidst endless scrolling and robotic interactions, individuals struggle to embrace true emotion and form meaningful relationships. Through 'Kordovero 22', I aim to depict the poignant reality of modern homosexuality, particularly within Tel Aviv's scene, showcasing the challenges of connection, building genuine emotions, and the longing for authentic human connection. The film captures a twenty-minute encounter between two men, revealing the rapid pace of emotions and experiences, from initial connection to eventual fulfillment and the cycle of emptiness. Written from the heart, it presents a myriad of experiences, offering insight into the daily lives of Tel Aviv's gay community
