“The Girl Who Had No Fear” is a short fiction film written and directed by Rafael Beck and produced by Estudio Gaveta. Lasting 5 minutes, this engaging short film mixes elements of suspense, drama and cosmic horror to tell the story of a girl who sees her life change drastically on the day of a mysterious solar eclipse.

The plot unfolds from this rare and powerful moment, where reality and the unknown intertwine, just as the most playful elements merge with the girl’s feelings of fear and dread. With Lara Palma’s captivating performance, “The Girl Who Had No Fear” promises to hold viewers’ attention from start to finish, inviting them to explore the mysteries and emotions of a girl trying to communicate with the world around her and tell what only she is able to see.

Hybrid short film that mixes AI-generated elements for animated sequences and was entirely filmed in Orlando, Florida between 2023 and 2024.

THE SYNOPSIS:

“A mysterious solar eclipse changes everything in the life of that girl who loves to draw. And now, where things are no longer what they seem, she will have to find a way to face her worst nightmare.”

THE DIRECTOR

Coming from the world of music with the direction of music videos, studio recording and major coverage of international festivals, Rafael Beck made his debut in the field of fiction as art director in the short film “Eu e Crocodilos” shown at the Sundance Festival in 2019. After that, among his more commercial works he began directing original short films, including the 8mm stopmotion animation “Juanito” and the documentary “Movement for the Movement” about cultural resilience movements filmed in the state of NY.

He currently dedicates himself exclusively to film projects, opening a new season of productions, with his production company Estudio Gaveta, directing the short films “Colder”, “The Fire Walk With Me” and “The Girl Who Had no Fear” and also acting as producer and showrunner of a streaming series project called “Os Não Eles”.
