Directors' statement

The constant chase for national pride and glory often makes us forget a simple truth: we all live on the same, fragile planet. The Olympics, once a symbol of peace, have turned into an event where the environment pays the price for our ambitions. The 2018 Korean Winter Olympics left lasting marks on the land, and now Italy is facing a similar challenge. This film became my journey—two years of exploring the deep connection between mountains and people, the grandeur of the Games, and the quieter, shared path we all walk. Through this, I found not just the stories of individuals and places, but the powerful impact of our choices on the world we all share.
