DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

I wanted to make this film because it spoke to me, storywise, thematically and also because the way, the structure and the setting of the film interested me. The choice of having it take place in a dream setting allowed it to go places it otherwise couldn't. I've drawn inspiration from a multitude of mediums, films, papers, blogs, music, etc discussing the themes of this film and then brought a piece of myself into it. The story comes from a place of uncertainty and fear. One that derives from a personal view and a wavering hope in that what we do and who we are matters and, despite it all, can forge a light in a dark tunnel.

The process of bringing the story to life had many challenges, as I had never done anything like it on this scale, and with backing and financing from Film i Västerbotten, the film was set on its way. This film was a collective effort and having this truly hard-working and engaged cast and crew is what made it possible. Throughout this process, I've learned so much about both filmmaking as well as myself, and despite the difficulties, I wouldn't trade it for anything.
