Synopsis: As Adrian Reamey searches for her Chilean birth mother, she discovers an article about an American man stolen as a baby from Chile in the 1980s and trafficked to the United States through an illegal adoption — leaving Adrian grappling to wonder if she, too, was stolen. Her search quickly unravels into a full investigation in this three-part docuseries where a horrifying truth emerges. An estimated 20,000 babies were trafficked internationally during the Pinochet dictatorship at the hands of an elaborate network involving the Chilean military government, judges, hospitals, Catholic priests, orphanages, and social workers. Along with powerful testimonies from other Chilean adoptees, birth mothers, economists, and politicians, government officials in both Chile and the United States provide shocking insight into the extent of the network and cover up, and the influence of the United States Government. With heart-wrenching interviews, expert testimonies, and emotional reunions, Hola Mamá captures the profound toll of human rights violations and those now willing to fight for justice.

EPISODE 101

Follows Chilean-American adoptee Adrian Reamey on her journey to find her birth mother and investigate her suspicions about being trafficked during the Pinochet dictatorship, leading to the discovery of a nefarious policy intended to increase adoptions in Chile's poor communities.

EPISODE 102

Adrian follows other adoptees who were stolen at birth, and learns of their mothers' horror stories. She investigates the corrupt trafficking network, including doctors, judges, lawyers, social workers and priests, and discovers the root cause to be an experimental economic system implemented by the Pinochet regime.

EPISODE 103

The finale follows Adrian's quest for justice as the adoptees band together to get to the President of Chile. She reveals the source of the evil corruption and reaches the highest international powers at the UN and in the US advocating for accountability and change.

TARGET INTERVIEWEES: Secretary of State Marco Rubio, Senator Bernie Sanders, Representative Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez, Representative Elise Stefanik
