

FLÂNEUSE – PRESS RELEASE

“...the proof of the worst choice is the crowd itself.”
Seneca – On the Happy Life

Flâneuse is a woman of wandering spirit who has begun to ruthlessly question everything in her life her lover, his cats, and everything else she shares her existence with. In defiance of the futile hustle around her, she turns her face toward stillness and nature.

Accompanied by her inner voice, the film searches for an answer to this question:
Does being aware of the miracle of life make us victorious—or eternally alone?

Filming took place in the rural regions of Seferihisar and Urla.
As in the director’s first film (The First Samurai), this production was carried out on a voluntary basis and with a very limited budget, in pursuit of the best possible result.
