SYNOPSIS

Tafraoute, Morocco.

Mounir, a young dancer, has crossed the sea, fleeing the shifting winds of a France that's closing in on itself.

There, the sun feels familiar, but the walls speak another language.

A conversation with Keltoum rekindles his doubts: how does one find a place to call home?

Between two shores, an intimate journey through invisible borders and the deep longing to belong.

DIRECTED BY PIERRE-LOYS JOUBERT

Pierre-Loys is a cinematographer for film, trained on set. He grew up in Marrakesh, Morocco, where he maintained deep connections. After years of crafting images for other people's stories films, music videos, commercials he felt the need to tell something more personal. Dikra is his first fiction short as a director.

MEMORY, MEMORIES

Shot in Morocco, Dikra is born from a very personal place the desire to listen to what memory whispers when everything else grows silent. It is a film where Morocco and France mirror each other through migration and return. The door we cannot open, and the strange feeling of truly belonging nowhere.

MOUNIR

Played by Mounir Amhiln

Mounir Amhiln is a French dancer and choreographer, born to Moroccan parents. Three-time French champion and two-time vice-world champion in breakdance, he has established himself as a prominent figure in the hip-hop scene. His style, which fuses break with contemporary, electro, and even classical influences, reflects both technical mastery and expressive freedom.

In Dikra, Mounir takes on the lead role, a character with whom he deeply resonated. The story mirrors aspects of his own life, and he was drawn to the film's lightly documentary approach, which allowed him to infuse the role with authenticity and bring a part of himself to the screen.
