

The hand of god_Final English Screenplay

[Scene 1: The Ancient Frontier] The camera faces the Baekje (an ancient kingdom on the Korean Peninsula) soldier directly from the front. In the distance, the Tang Dynasty army swarms toward him. The heavy, rumbling sound of tanks (symbolic/anachronistic) vibrates through the ground.

[Scene 2: The Fall] Soldiers fall in the chaos of battle. The focus is on the raw impact of the struggle and the desperate gaze of those collapsing. The external noise fades, replaced by the soldier's heavy, isolated breathing.

[Scene 3: The Transition] The Tang army swarms directly in front of the soldier's eyes, overwhelming the frame. A close-up of the soldier's fearful eye triggers an immediate shift to the next world.

[Scene 4: The Beautiful Park] The scene shifts to a beautiful park where a graceful waltz begins to play. Two elderly men are in the middle of a Janggi (Eastern Chess) game. One man calmly removes a red 'Ma' (Knight) piece from the board.

[Scene 5: The Waltz of Fate] A rapid cross-cutting montage interweaves the two worlds like a dance synchronized to the waltz rhythm. The movement and removal of the pieces dictate the life and death of the soldiers on the battlefield in a poetic yet brutal manner.

[Scene 6: The Solitude of Death] Back on the battlefield, the soldier is surrounded by enemy troops. A heavy, breathless silence dominates the screen as the world seems to stand still.

[Scene 7: The Cosmic Collision] The sky darkens as a massive comet descends toward the battlefield. In the park, a young boy kicks a soccer ball high into the air. The trajectories of the comet and the ball mirror each other.

[Scene 8: The Aftermath] The comet impacts the battlefield. Simultaneously, the soccer ball hits the elderly man's face in the park, scattering the Janggi pieces. A single blue 'Jol' (Pawn) falls onto the grass.

[Scene 9: The Abandoned Pawn] A small dog approaches the abandoned blue pawn on the ground, sniffing it in the quiet twilight.

[Scene 10: The New Journey] The soldier appears in a vibrant, primordial forest. As he pushes through the bushes and looks ahead, a gargantuan shadow looms over him. The screen fades to black.