

Nina

An accident is all it took for Nina to discover she isn't who she thought she was. Her identity is shattered. She is what she has always looked down on. Now, she's not only battling her own prejudice but also that of the entire world. She's a target because of who she is - what makes her who she is, whether she likes it or not.

In our world, countless individuals face similar circumstances and can relate to her story. Her struggle echoes across the ages.

And that's the point: Nina can be anyone.

“...a powerful commentary on societal attitudes...”
