LOGLINE:

A silent observation of sugary cloud snow as the season of Winter opens. In silence, watch as nature shows its true resilience.

SYNOPSIS: In Cloud Snow In New Winter, director Lillie Jean Trueman presents a meditative, silent study of New York City's transition into the frost. Eschewing dialogue for the raw visual splendor of "sugary" cloud snow, the film captures the slow, resilient motion of nature as the season opens. Through a lens of quiet contemplation, this short cinematic work invites the viewer to witness the world "as is"—a poignant exploration of stillness, endurance, and the delicate beauty of the winter landscape.
