Directors Statement:

Invasion of the FreeBox Monsters is a project that is near and dear to our hearts! The culmination of abilities, equipment and on the spot know how and how we grew as filmmakers is incredible!

We bring you our fun little B-Horror movie filmed in our home base of Portland Oregon!

Over the past years we have been able to produce some shorts and even a 4-part webseries about a woman giving Ray Bradberry like tattoos that produce retribution in the ink of a tattoo artists gun!

We experimented with equipment like using a PVC pipe as our first boom to investing in a homemade track and stand that kinda worked. We learned lessons as people and about people like just how many Haileys you can go through while making a film!

We love Portland and want to thank everyone whose helped us with our productions along the way! We were lucky to have Actors do multiple projects and all the help we got from folks about editing, white balance and the importance of independent audio!

Thanks to Portland and thanks to everyone whose lent their time and talent to Red Stool Production

SUMMERY / LOGLINE

A group of everyday citizens band together to defend the city of Portland against creatures from outer space. Will they be able to save the second annual Avocado Toast Festival..?"

After a press release from the mayor announcing the discovery of the creatures and how we should take care when approaching them. We have no idea where they came from but as long as things remain peaceful everything will work out fine! For now, everything is on track for the second annual Avocado Toast Festival!

After the scheduled increase in the 5 g signal or maybe someone has mishandled one of the creatures, but everyone stays calm! We have our national guard led by General Stone who is here to protect us all from the mysterious creatures! For now, all things are still going forward to celebrate the Avocado Toast Festival so go ahead and get down there and get yourself some Avocado toast!

Wow that got serious quick! After witnessing the carnage of the Free Box monsters all hope is not lost! Our way forward now rests with a team of rag tag survivors and a rando woodchipper? With teeth gnashing and fur flying our only way out are in the hands and paws of Father Day and the mystic cat Zoe lead the way for the citizens of Portland to argue and compromise another day!

Will General Stone's Missile defeat the Queen?

Can the citizens protect their beloved city of Portland Oregon?

Has Avocado toast replaced PB&J???

Find out the answers to these questions and more when you see

"INVASION OF THE FREEBOX MONSTERS!"

Red Stool Productions thanks all the Cast / Crew in Portland Oregon for thier time and talent in the making of all of our films.

After moving to Portland Oregon from the east coast Peter Grey decided to pursue his lifelong interest in film and movies!

What started as a minor role in a film students graduate project blossomed into a steady pursuit of Background Acting growing into a dependable Day Player working all over the PNW!

Spending the month of October developing his own unique Haunt persona and working with a live show for years as a Haunt denizen in the Pacific Northwest!

Having these opportunities to work on a very large production while taking note of the equipment and how it's used was good use of his time. On set and studying the day-to-day operations while asking questions of directors, show runners and everyday background actors while translating this experience into his own understanding of independent film.

Directing a film and working with live humans is not for everyone, but developing the ability while experienced enough to relate to different people with varying backgrounds who all showed up to do a job is a real asset.

Peter Grey brings the experience / ability to pull a production together while producing a coherent film and having some fun along the way!

SWEET FUZZY MONSTERS DESTROYING DOWNTOWN PDX!

After wrapping up yet another fun short we did title KLAX we wanted to try something gander, larger, more ambitious so we started on our first feature film A little B-Horror movie about cr4eatures that came from outer space or underground somehow have reached the surface and began a series of terrifying events that truly need to be seen to comprehend!

Our puppeteers and the monsters that developed with them did an awesome job staying creative and underbudget to deliver to Fuzzy Menace and liberate Portland Oregon from this bloody Scurge!

Join Father Day and his cats Veterinarian (Chris Isenbarger) as they team up with the rando group of kids as they struggle with the growing dread of something larger lurking below?

Can they reach the Queen before the demise of the Second Annual Avocado Toast Festival???

Will they survive the gnashing teeth of a fuzzy creature out for BLOOD?

Join us for a bloody good time and see.....

CRAWLING UNDERGROUND TO EATING FACEES IN PDX!

As time went by and the gang at our little production company wanted more! After a couple of years of renting conference rooms and some really strange Air BnB s with host who refused to leave while we filmed. We knew going in that we needed folks who we knew and who were just as ambitious and that's when the Screenplay started by all of us that's why the copyright reads Red Stool Productions because we got input from everybody!

We rented out a home base from the cool folks at The Farm Arts & Media anow defunct art group who really came through with the fuzzy little beasts! Making teeth out of plastic fork tines, finding the exact fuzzy things we needed to make our monsters.

We needed something cool that could hold our blood concoction (no I can't give out the recipe) and not collapse under the weight of being wet.

Then it was the city we love! We have tons of footage that didn't make it into the 29 min of our film, but the lessons learned and experience we got doing it was worth it!

After false starts and disagreements over stuff to prioritize when shooting our Executive Producer (my wife of 25+) SDZ to come in and break it up she decided what goes in and helped me in the editing process with what to keep!

From Actors dropping out again and again to being so short on crew we had to give an urban camper $50 to hold this camera for a bit to a flood in the storage unit and soaking important documents that were fine after we dried them out with a blow dryer!

Invasion of the FreeBox monsters is a very important work for me personally. After shooting I had to undergo a couple of surgeries but used that time to register the copyright and edit, edit, and some more editing!

After CVOVID stopped the project to my recovery efforts my wife SDZ and the entire gang at Red Stool productions hope you enjoy our B-Horror movie and have some fun and coming to a Festival Theatre near you!

FAQ

1) Q; How did the idea for the film arise?

A: On set of the third episode of a web series at an Air BnB when someone picked up a sock and started making jokes to “I bet that would make a Killer puppet”

2) Q: The challenges we encountered making the film.

A: Portland had a lot of urban camping at the time so you would scout out a location only to have it re-populate overnight.

3) Q; Was the woman beating the Maga Monsters with a spoon really your mother?

A: YES! She’s still fighting fascists to this day!

4) Q; How did we cast the roles?

A: People we used from other projects and Craigslist Gigs section.

5) Q; Key memory from production?

A: Jerry the Urban Camper holding our camera for a shot we didn’t use.

6) Q; What techniques did we use making the film?

A: Created a custom crossfade that moved the film forward

7) Q; How does this differ from our previous work?

A: Our first B Horror film. Some wanted to make it longer and include everything but that’s not how editing works. Edit with the story not your idea of a story.

8) Q; Odd Story?

A: Air BnB host greeted us at the door and stayed for the entire day of filming to make sure we are not “Doing the porn in there” real quote from real host

Hal Barry as Mr. Mayor!
