

INTO UNCERTAINTY

AN EXPLORATION OF RISK

"Into Uncertainty begins by asking why people willingly step into danger. It becomes a larger meditation on what happens when certainty becomes the condition for living."

Two emergency-management professionals who spend their careers preparing for catastrophe enter a ten-day, unsupported expedition across Baja to investigate why people voluntarily choose risk. When wildfire deployments derail their preparation and the journey begins in chaos, mechanical failures, isolation, exhaustion, and the absence of a formal safety net force them to confront the limits of control. Filmed entirely from inside the expedition, Into Uncertainty becomes less about conquering a route than about what shared risk reveals — friendship, vulnerability, grief, presence, and the danger of waiting for certainty before fully living.
