FILM SYNOPSIS

"Last Call" is a dark comedy short about a self-sabotaging party girl, Nikki, who wakes up in purgatory following a drunkenly deadly accident. Unprepared for her arrival, Nikki's less-than-enthusiastic angel forces her to confront her cringiest blackouts and the bad decisions she can no longer laugh off. What begins as a comedic hangover set in liminal space quickly becomes a reckoning with accountability, memory, and the stories we tell to excuse ourselves.

BRI BAGLEY, WRITER & “NIKKI”

BIO

Bri Bagley is an actor, singer, writer, and now...first-time filmmaker (eek!) with a goofy spirit & love-able {screw} up energy! With a background in theatre, she has spent years performing everywhere from cruise ships to the Edinburgh Fringe. Now she is stepping behind the camera to bring her own story to life. “Last Call” is a surreal, emotional exploration of the weight our choices carry-and whether redemption is ever really out of reach.

MIKE PRATT, DIRECTOR

BIO

Mike Pratt is a New England-based actor and writer whose debut novel, Code of the Nightbird, was recently adapted for the screen in the forthcoming short film, Galilee. Mike has had a lifelong love of acting and film, which he began working toward a career in when Don't Look Up serendipitously filmed at his workplace office. He has since worked on numerous independent and short films, including the queer thriller, Interference (New Bedford Film Festival nomination for Best Supporting Actor), and horror short, Casting Kill (Bridgeport Film Festival nomination for Lead Actor in a Comedy). His role in the feature film The Compatriots allowed him to join the Screen Actors Guild. Mike can soon be seen in the second season of the web series, Balls of Tin. He received a Bachelor of Arts degree with a minor in Theatre Arts from Stonehill College and has since studied screen acting at Boston Casting, The Open Studio NYC, and has been a long-standing member of Dennis Staroselsky's Advanced Acting for the Camera class at CP Casting.

ARTIST'S STATEMENT

Bri Bagley has always been drawn to lovable, yet messy women, bad decisions, and the humor that lives inside uncomfortable truths. She is especially interested in the stories we tell ourselves to soften the blow of our worst nights...the jokes, excuses, and misplaced confidence that kicks in the morning after. "Last Call" was born from that fascination.

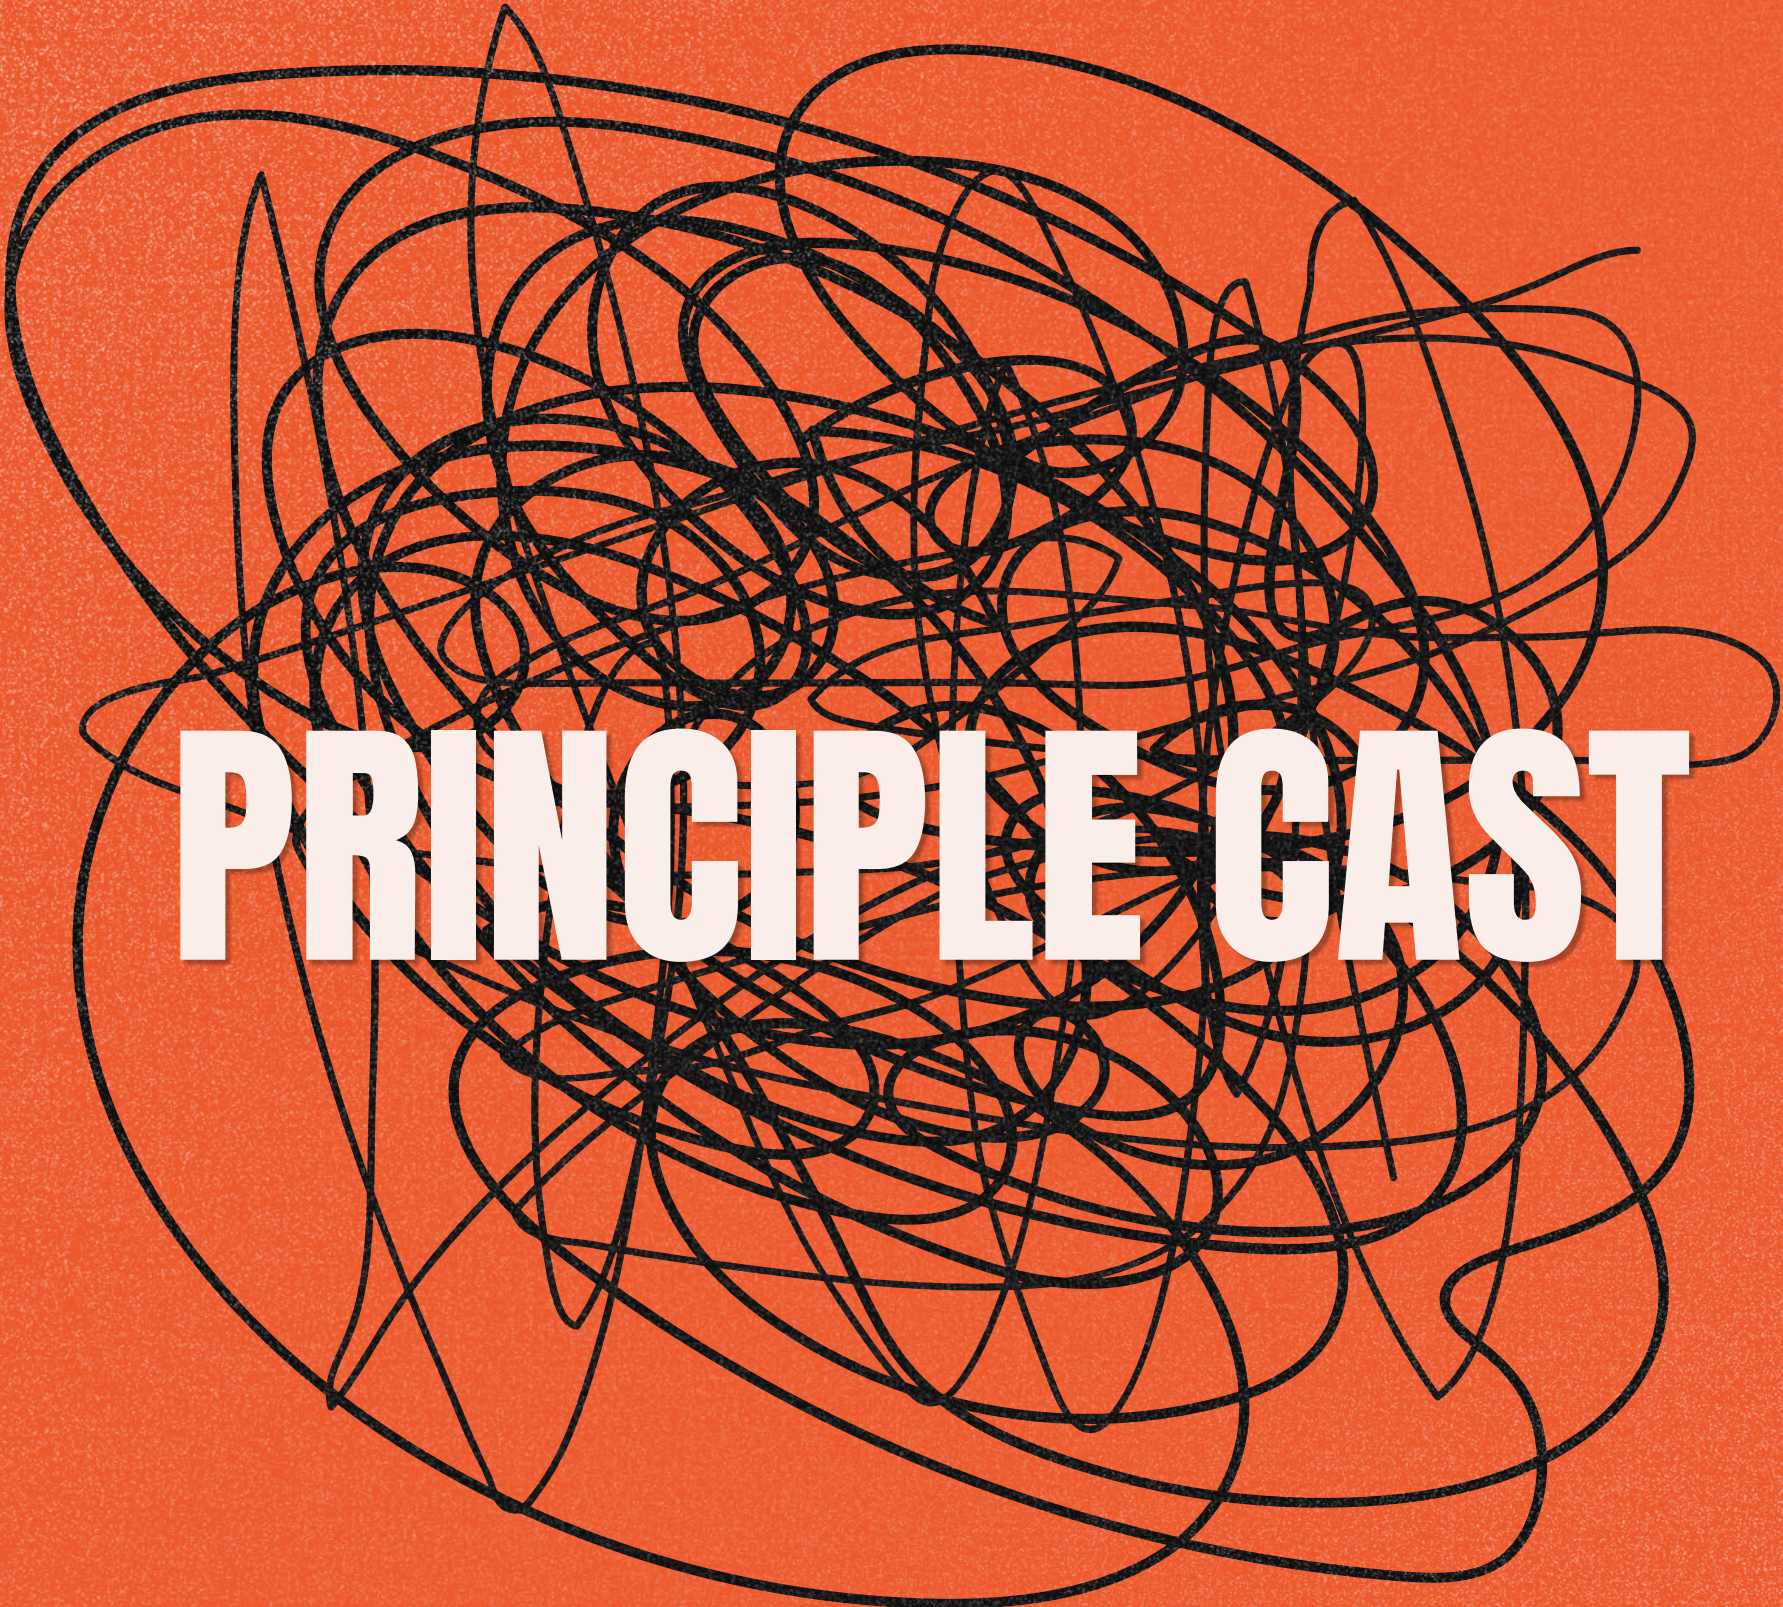

The film follows Nikki, a reckless party girl who wakes up in a surreal, liminal afterlife where her blackout memories are judged, replayed, and reframed. It's a heightened take on a familiar feeling: the urge to laugh things off while quietly avoiding what's actually going on under the surface.

She's drawn to spaces that feel suspended in time; bars after last call, fluorescent rooms, places where the party's over but the consequences linger. In "Last Call", those spaces become our emotional purgatory. Comedy is the entry point: humor disarms and makes room for discomfort to sneak up behind it.

At its core, "Last Call" is about accountability without cruelty. It's not interested in punishment or moralizing, but in the awkward, often funny process of self-reckoning. We've all had a "last call" moment...the lights come up, the spell breaks, and we're left alone with ourselves. This film lives right there.

“What really stood out to me is how much the film works as a showcase for Bri Bagley. She’s genuinely funny, and it’s not just in the dialogue—it’s in the physicality of her performance. Her body language, facial expressions, and willingness to be the butt of the joke all land really well. There’s a natural comedic rhythm to how she performs, and she carries this short effortlessly from start to finish. For a 12-minute film, that kind of screen presence is important, and she keeps you engaged throughout.”

- JUST FOR MOVIE FREAKS

“Bagley [is] an absolute gem as Nikki. I adored Nikki. Heck, at one time in life I probably was Nikki. This is what really makes Last Call work. Bagley makes sure that amidst all the chaos that we still give a damn about Nikki and that, maybe just maybe, there's a little bit of Nikki in an awful lot of us. ”
